What is overselling and how does it affect me?

Overselling refers to the process in which providers assume most of their customers won't use their allotted storage and therefore pack more customers than their hardware can handle. At polur, we go the extra mile to ensure each server operates at its peak performance even if every user uses their full allotment. Each server we operate has enough capacity for all our customers to use their full package quota, while still leaving ample room for future growth.
